Background

Michael Hilkin advises clients on all aspects of complex state and local tax matters. His practice focuses on tax controversy and transactional issues relating to state and local income, franchise, sales and use, gross receipts and other business taxes, along with issues related to the taxation of cannabis. He has been involved in controversies regarding state and local tax issues before administrative and judicial systems throughout the United States.

Michael is a frequent lecturer concerning state and local tax issues and has spoken before the Council on State Taxation, the Practising Law Institute, the New Jersey State Bar Association, TeleStrategies, and Interstate Tax.

Prior to joining Eversheds Sutherland, Michael worked for a large international law firm where he also focused on state and local tax issues.
